

The National Institute of Mental Health awarded Dr. Richard Davidson, PhD, professor of psychology and psychiatry, a large grant for emotion research. Dr. Davidson and the Waisman Center will lead the grant to establish a Conte Center for Neurobehavioral Bases of Emotion Regulation & Dysregulation in Adolescence. Research that will benefit from the new funding includes that of Marilyn Essex, PhD, and Ned Kalin, MD. Drs. Essex and Kalin will continue interdisciplinary research in emotion with a new age-group focus with other Wisconsin labs, in related projects in one-year increments through May 31, 2013.
